

MARGARET C. JACOB

Dr. Jacob teaches history at University of California Los Angeles. She earned her B.A. from St. Joseph's College in 1964 and her Ph.D. from Cornell University in 1968. She was recruited to UCLA from the University of Pennsylvania.

Dr. Jacob's interests lie in the history of science, and in intellectual history more broadly, and she has worked in British, Dutch, French and Belgian history. Her archival research has taken her to London, Birmingham, Manchester, and to Amsterdam, The Hague, Brussels, Paris and various French provincial towns. In 2002 she was awarded an honorary doctorate from the University of Utrecht and made a member of the American Philosophical Society and the Hollandse Maatschappij der Wetenschappen. She has been visiting faculty at l'Ecole des hautes etudes and, recently, the University of Ulster. Currently she holds a grant from the NEH for Collaborative Research on scientific application and early industrialization in Britain. She also has an active interest in British radicals and romantics of the 1790s. She has commented on issues in the so-called "science wars" and has written on historical methods and practices.

Among Dr. Jacob's published works, includes: Strangers Nowhere in the World: The Rise of Cosmopolitanism in Early Modern Europe, published by the University of Pennsylvania Press; The Origins of Freemasonry, Facts and Fictions, University of Pennsylvania Press; "Mechanical Science on the Factory Floor: The Early Industrial Revolution in Leeds," History of Science, 2007; "Bernard Picart and the Turn to Modernity," De Achttiende eeuw; Practical Matter. The Impact of Newton's Science from 1687 to 1851, with Larry Stewart, Harvard University Press; "Missing now Found in the Eighteenth Century. Weber's Protestant Capitalist," with M. Kadane, American Historical Review; "A Women's Scientific Society in the West: The Late Eighteenth Century Assimilation of Science," with D. Sturkenboom, Isis; "Why did Humphrey Davy not apply nitrous oxide to the relief of pain?," with Michael Sauter, The Journal of the History of Medicine; and Telling the Truth about History, with Lynn Hunt and Joyce Appleby, New York, W.W.Norton, Reviewed New York Times Book Review, March 25, 1994. TLS, June 10, 1994; The New Republic, Oct. 24, 1994; editions in Spanish, Polish, Lithuanian and Chinese under contract. A selection of the History Book Club. Forums on the book in History and Theory and the Journal of the History of Ideas.